Scientists have been studying volcanoes for many years. They want to find ways to predict when volcanoes will erupt. Such knowledge could help protect people from a volcano's sudden burst of hot lava and ash. Although scientists can't say exactly when a volcano will erupt, they know that a slight change in the shape of the earth is one warning sign. Another is that some volcanoes emit a gas called sulfur dioxide before they erupt.

This story is mainly about:

- a) becoming a scientist
- b) natural disaster
- c) the dangers of volcanoes
- d) predicting volcanic eruptions
- e) benefits of volcanoes

Correct Answer: D
